

B L A C K S U N L I T

BROOKLYN, NY

Introducing Apostasy by Katy Mongeau, forthcoming March 16, 2020 from Black Sun Lit.

“Sea, listen. Cliff, I’m coming.”

Apostasy is a becoming and a deathwish—bloom, raunch, wilt, and rot. Ecstatic and erotic, mythic and mystical, fecund and feculent, Katy Mongeau’s debut collection of poems expresses at once the delight and despair of discovery and renunciation with ballads to burning horses that drag behind them a deeply fraught and frantic love, galloping us to the gallows by the rhythm of a flame and the withering of a flower. Reminiscent of Acker and Bataille, Apostasy is the wheat field we visit to die.

Literature/Poetry

Publication date: March 16, 2020

Paperback | 94 pages

ISBN: 978-0-9994312-5-2

$15.00 U.S. | $20.00 International

Contact Jared D. Fagen, Editor, for press inquiries:

blacksunlit.com | @BlackSunLit | editors@blacksunlit.com

“At the center of speechlessness Katy Mongeau attempts utterance—recklessly, sentimentally, desperately, sometimes with erasure and cancellation, sometimes with embellishment, hanging on to the vestiges of violence, wreckage and sensation, writing and unwriting, tending the wound at its core.”

—Carole Maso, author of AVA

KATY MONGEAU is a writer from Jacksonville, FL. She holds an MFA from Brown University and currently resides in New York.

Available directly from Black Sun Lit or Small Press Distribution.
blacksunlit.com/apostasy | spdbooks.org

